LUKOIL IS AMONG THE FIRST COMPANIES TO RECEIVE 'MADE IN RUSSIA' EXPORT CERTIFICATE

LUKOIL Lubricants Company has received the 'Made in Russia' export certificate. As a producer of high tech lubricants, LUKOIL was among Russia's first six companies representing different industrial sectors to receive this quality certificate.

The ceremony was held in Moscow by Russian Export Center (REC), the state institution created to provide integrated export support to Russian manufacturers.

The 'Made in Russia' project aims to increase recognition of Russian products abroad by providing a wide range of services to promote Russian goods.

"We sincerely welcome REC's initiatives to provide multi-faceted support of Russian companies' export operations. Many progressive countries already provide export support to local companies. Furthermore, 'Made in Russia' certificate gives additional quality assurance of Russian goods in international markets," noted LUKOIL Lubricants Company General Director Maxim Donde.
